learner-friendly? rather than merely focusing on rote memorization of rules.

Core Principles of Parrott's Grammar Approach

- Grammar in Context

Parrott emphasizes that grammar should be taught within meaningful contexts rather than in isolation. He advocates for:

- Using authentic texts, dialogues, and real-life situations.
- Highlighting how grammatical forms function in actual communication.
- Encouraging learners to notice patterns and use them creatively.

- Focus on Form and Function

Rather than treating grammar as a set of discrete rules, Parrott promotes understanding:

- Form: The structural aspect of grammatical items (e.g., tense, word order).
- Function: The communicative purpose they serve (e.g., expressing time, making requests).

Balancing form and function helps learners see the relevance of grammar in real-life use.

- Learner-Centered Teaching

Parrott advocates for teaching methods that consider:

- Learners' existing knowledge and misconceptions.
- Their specific needs and language goals.
- Active engagement and discovery learning.

- Gradual and Sequential Learning

He recommends a staged approach:

- Introduce simple structures first.
- Consolidate understanding before progressing to more complex forms.
- Reinforce previous knowledge regularly.

A. Using Authentic Materials

Incorporate real-life texts such as emails, advertisements, dialogues, or news articles. For example:

- Analyzing how present perfect tense is used in news reports.
- Exploring modal verbs in customer service dialogues.

B. Eliciting Learner Input

Encourage students to produce sentences using targeted structures before formal explanations. This can be achieved through:

- Gap-filling exercises.
- Sentence transformation tasks.
- Peer correction activities.

C. Focus on Form and Meaning

Design activities that highlight both the grammatical structure and its purpose. For example:

- Role-plays that require using conditionals to suggest solutions.
- Writing tasks that focus on tense consistency in storytelling.

D. Promoting Noticing

Help learners become aware of grammatical features in input. Techniques include:

- Underlining or highlighting grammatical forms in texts.
- Using guided discovery questions to lead learners to recognize patterns.

E. Error Analysis and Feedback

Provide constructive feedback by:

- Identifying common errors linked to specific structures.
- Explaining why errors occur and how to correct them.
- Using errors as teaching points rather than merely correcting.
