One of the central techniques Descartes employs is the method of radical doubt, often summarized as:

- Question everything: Descartes doubts all sensory perceptions, the existence of the physical world, and even mathematical truths.
- Aim for certainty: Through skepticism, he seeks to find indubitable foundations upon which knowledge can be built.

The Cogito: 'I think, therefore I am'

The most famous conclusion from Descartes' meditations is the cogito:

"I think, therefore I am" (Cogito, ergo sum).

This statement emerges as an undeniable truth uncovered through systematic doubt. Regardless of the deception of the senses or the possibility of an evil demon, the very act of doubting confirms the existence of the thinking self.

The Nature of the Mind and Body

Descartes argues for a dualistic separation between mind and body:

- Res cogitans: The thinking, non-material mind.
- Res extensa: The physical, extended body and matter.

This distinction leads to significant discussions about the mind-body problem, consciousness, and personal identity.

The Existence of God

In later meditations, Descartes presents philosophical arguments for the existence of God, including:

- The Trademark Argument: The idea of a perfect being (God) must have been placed in us by a being that actually exists, because we could not conceive of such a perfect being without its existence.
